As the duty of preparing this catalogue for the press devolved mostly on one individual, there will probably be found numerous errors.

Owing to the very imperfect state of the records, and want of particularity in registering the names of the scholars, doubtless some names are omitted which should be inserted. From the same cause, the Committee were obliged to arrange the scholars collectively under the different Principals, until 1821, instead of the respective years they entered, which would have been more desirable.

The residences of the pupils, at the time they attended school, are inserted.

When an individual has received graduating honors, the name of the institution from which he graduated, and the year, are inserted. When one entered College, and did not finish the course, the name of the institution, only, is inserted.

There has been no record kept of the different Assistant Teachers, consequently their names are not inserted in this Catalogue.

An asterisk (*) is placed before the names of those who are dead. Other abbreviations will be known without explanation.

Preface.

Hon. William Dummer, from whom this Institution received its name, was born at Byfield in 1679. He was grandson of Hon. Richard Dummer, who came from England in 1632. He went to Plymouth, England, when quite young, and was there appointed Commissioner, which office he held until his appointment as Lieut. Gov. of Massachusetts, under Governor Shute, in 1716. Upon the Governor's departure for England in 1723, he was left at the head of the Province until the arrival of Burnet, in 1728. He also performed the duties of Governor in the interval between the death of Burnet and the arrival of Belcher. From the year 1730 he lived principally in retirement on his paternal estate in Byfield. He died at Boston, October 10th, 1761, leaving his valuable farm and stately mansion house, which is now standing, for the endowment of the Academy.

From some cause of delay the school was not opened until 1763.* The first teacher was Samuel Moody, A. M., son of Rev. Joseph Moody, the first minister of the North Church in York, Me. He graduated at Harvard University in 1746, and was a very celebrated and successful teacher in his native town, until called to take charge of the Academy. Under his tuition, during his residence at York, were Joseph Willard, D.D., LL. D., afterwards President of Harvard University, Caleb Strong, LL. D., afterwards Governor of Massachusetts, and others who attained to great eminence, and who ever cherished a grateful remembrance of the profitable hours they spent under his care. Upon the opening of the Academy, under his instruction, it at once attained a very high and unrivalled reputation. Youth from all parts of this State, and the neighboring States, collected to enjoy its privileges, and during its most palmy days it was not only filled to overflowing, but frequently great numbers applied, who could not be admitted. For over seven years the number of scholars averaged upwards of seventy. The fame of Master Moody was spread far and wide, and no prouder memorial of his success as a teacher could be given, than the names on the catalogue, of those whom he educated.

But his intense labors brought on a mental aberration, which, though

* It may not be amiss to state here, that Dea. Benjamin Colman, who was present the first day the Academy was opened, is now living, at the advanced age of 93.

at first slight, was afterwards so increased as to incapacitate him for the responsibilities of his situation. He died at Exeter, N. H., December 14th, 1795, and was interred in his native village. A plain stone alone marks the spot where the remains of this distinguished and worthy man lie, with the following inscription upon it.

Integer vitae scelerisque purus.

SAMUEL MOODY, Esq.

PRECEPTOR OF DUMMER ACADEMY,

The First Institution of the kind in Massachusetts.
He left no child to mourn his sudden death,
(for he died a bachelor.)
Yet his numerous pupils in the United States, will ever retain a lively sense of the sociability, industry, integrity, and piety he possessed in an uncommon degree; as well as the disinterested, zealous, faithful and useful manner, he discharged the duties of the Academy for Thirty Years.
He died at Exeter, December 14, 1795,
Aged Seventy.

If (says a worthy pupil of Master Moody, who is now living,) there was ever a man of whom all this could be truly said, that man was Master Moody.

His eminent success as a teacher was owing in a great degree to his keen observation of character, and entire devotedness to the profession of his choice. Few men ever had that control over youth which he possessed. He was exceedingly beloved by his pupils, and at the same time highly respected. He never commanded, but to be obeyed. He did not deem it necessary at all times to preserve perfect silence in the school-room, and very frequently the scholars were permitted to study aloud, to leave their seats, and converse with each other during study hours; yet, so perfect was his government, that one rap on his desk invariably brought them into complete order. The rod was used but seldom, and he took pride in the fact that for thirty years, while teacher, he had never resorted to it. He devised many expedients to take its place. One, for example, which is often mentioned by his surviving pupils was, that if a scholar was found guilty of falsehood, to punish him by detaining him from his sports on Saturday afternoon until he had read through the book of Proverbs.

During Master Moody's incumbency, in 1782, the Academy was incorporated. Previous to this time, the Academy had, in accordance with the will of Gov. Dummer, been under the direction of Trustees appointed by the Parish of Byfield. But by a singular assumption of power, the Legislature appointed a new board of Trustees, under the act of Incorporation, who, with their successors, have since had the control of the School.

Master Moody was succeeded by Rev. Isaac Smith, a native of Boston. He graduated at Harvard University, in 1767. After finishing his studies he went to England, and was there a settled clergyman for a number of years. Upon his return to this country in 1789, he was appointed Tutor in Harvard University, which office he held until his appointment as Principal of Dummer Academy, in 1790. Upon leaving the Academy he returned to Boston, where he died in 1827.

While Mr. Smith was Principal, in 1797, the Institution received from the State a grant of half a township of land.

Benjamin Allen, LL.D., succeeded Master Smith. He graduated at Brown University, in 1797, and was Tutor in that Institution one year. He was afterwards Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in Union College until 1809, when he was appointed Principal of Dummer Academy. He remained at the head of the Institution nearly two years, when he accepted an appointment as Professor of Ancient Languages in Pennsylvania University. He afterwards taught an Academy at Hyde Park, N. Y. where he died.

The next Teacher, Rev. Abiel Abbott, D.D., was born at Wilton, N.H. He graduated at Harvard University in 1787, and was in 1794 appointed Tutor in that Institution, which office he held one year, after which he was settled as a clergyman in Coventry, Ct. Upon leaving his Society in 1811, he was appointed Principal of Dummer Academy, which office he held until 1819. For a short time after leaving the Academy, he resided on his farm at Andover, but was subsequently ordained pastor of a church in Petersboro', where he now resides.

Mr. Abbott was succeeded by Hon. Samuel Adams, who was born at Georgetown. He graduated at Harvard University in 1806, and was for several years a very popular teacher of a private school in Salem, and afterwards a member of the State Senate. He entered upon his duties as Principal in 1819, but from declining health was obliged to resign in 1821. He survived his resignation but a short time.

The next Teacher, Nehemiah Cleaveland, A.M., was born at Topsfield. He graduated at Bowdoin College in 1813, in which Institution he was Tutor for three years. He was appointed Principal in 1821, and was at the head of the Institution with eminent success until 1840. Upon leaving the Academy he was appointed Principal of the Lowell High School. He is at present Principal of a Female Seminary in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Rev. Frederic A. Adams, the present incumbent was born at New Ipswich, N. H., and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1834, in which Institution he was Tutor for several years. He was subsequently a settled clergyman in Amherst, N. H. He was appointed Principal in 1840.

Such is a brief sketch of this ancient Institution, and the different Principals who have presided over it, under whose instruction during the eighty-one years of its operation, over fourteen hundred youth have received the rudiments of their education.

No Institution affords greater inducements for scholars to avail themselves of its advantages than Dummer Academy. Its situation, being located in one of the most beautiful country villages in New England, at a distance from any place of public amusement or resort, and the low price of board and tuition, render it peculiarly a desirable place for the education of youth.

There is belonging to the Academy a well selected library, part of which was a donation from Gov. Dummer, and valuable Astronomical and Philosophical Apparatus.

This catalogue is published under the direction of the Society of "The Sons of Dummer Academy." This association was formed in 1822, by several individuals who had received their early education at this Institution. All persons are eligible for membership in this Society, who have been pupils at the Academy, and have attained the age of twenty-one years, or who have received a degree at College. The payment of fifty dollars by any member, constitutes him a Patron of the Society. The payment of ten dollars makes an individual a Life Member. Otherwise the annual payment of one dollar is required. The Society holds its annual meetings on the day of the public examination of the Academy, one week before the Cambridge Commencement.

Its object, beside the cultivation of friendly intercourse and social feelings among its members, was, to accumulate a fund, the income of which should be appropriated annually by the Society in awarding prizes for scholarship, and for other purposes which should promote the improvement of the students, and extend the general usefulness and reputation of the Institution. Of its founders, and those who were most active for its success, were Hon. Dudley Atkins Tyng, LL.D., who was for many years its President ; Hon. Nathan Noyes, M.D. ; Hon. Jeremiah Nelson ; Hon. Edward S. Rand, who is now president of the Association, and others whom the Institution is proud to look upon as her most gifted and honored sons. The Society has been very successful in accumulating funds, and much has been expended for the purposes above enumerated ; and it is hoped by the Society that this publication will not be the least benefit it confers on the Academy ;—that besides the pleasure it will afford to those who have gone forth from its walls, by recalling to their minds their associates here, and the school-day scenes connected with them,—it will not be without its effect in inspiring them with a fresh love and zeal for the interests of this venerable and time honored institution. As such it is offered to the gentlemen of the Board of Trustees and to the numerous alumni of Dummer.
